It's Rattlesnake Season Again!

We just want to make everyone aware that it is rattlesnake season in Idyllwild, so be very careful when you let your dogs out to root and snoop. An animal bitten up here would have to be transported to a veterinarian off of the mountain for treatment.

At Sadie's, Dr. Michael provides a series of two rattlesnake vaccinations approximately two to four weeks apart, that would be followed by yearly booster vaccinations. The rattlesnake vaccination, if you act quickly, can allow you enough time to get your pet off the mountain and to a veterinarian for treatment. It can also lessen the severity of the bite. So please consider making an appointment for your pet's rattlesnake vaccinations. Please, also check your property for wood piles and other hiding places for snakes.

You may make appointments for Sadie's Clinic by calling 659-1122, and press option #2 to leave us a message. Calls are picked up daily, and returned in the order they are received. We try to return calls within 24 hours. Please leave your name (first, last), pet's name, reason for appointment, and a return call number. Your pets are very important to us. 🐾

The Groomer Says...Goodbye to Your Dog's Wintercoat

As you all know, the warm weather is creeping up on us. What does this mean for your pets?? Well it means keep that water bowl full of clean, fresh water all the time. They need good shelter from the sun, just as they did from the cold.

Get your brushes and combs out, and get rid of that cotton undercoat. It is the undercoat they acquire during the cold months for warmth that makes them hot in the summer. Your dog does still need its fur, minus the undercoat, for protection from the sun and many other things. It's like the hair on your head; remove it and you get a sunburn or worse. At least people can put a hat on to protect themselves from the elements. If you can't handle removing the undercoat yourself, make an appointment with your groomer. This is a very hard job, and you need the proper tools to do it correctly, especially if you are working on a large dog with long hair. Your pets will feel so much better when they are rid of that winter undercoat.

The regular coat works as insulation from the cold with the undercoat, and it protects them from the sun in the hot months when the undercoat is removed. I realize it is much easier to shear your large dogs down, but it is not always in your pet's best interest. So discuss to shear, or not to shear, with your groomer first. Shearing down is a much easier job for a groomer than to remove mat and shed out of an undercoat. As I mentioned before, it's not always in the pet's best interest, especially if your dog spends a lot of time outside. So please take care of your pets' summer needs. They will love you for making them comfortable. This article pertains mostly to the larger dogs such as Australian Shepherds, G. Shepherds, Huskies, Chow Chows, and the medium-to-large mixed breeds that also have this undercoat problem in the summer months. Remember your continued brushing of your pet will make it much easier when it does come time to get rid of this undercoat.

Support ARF & Living Free on July 4; Volunteer or Just Show Up for the Fun!

The fun won't end with the annual Idyllwild July 4 Parade this year! Once you've enjoyed the parade, move onto the center of town and to the community center to celebrate our independence AND to support the two of the greatest animal rescues around!

ARF and Living Free have teamed up in a giant fund raiser that will include live entertainment, a chili cook-off, a dunk tank, a beer and wine garden, a food court, vendors, crafts for the kids (including a raft race!), Mr. & Ms. Idyllwild voting, "Strut Your Mutt" and "Crazy Dog-Tricks" contests, and a huge animal rescue fair. The center of Idyllwild will be the location of the July 4 festival, while the community center will be animal adoption central. The festivities will run from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m., when the winner of the chili cook-off will collect his or her $300 prize.

Volunteers are needed for short shifts to help staff the many venues and for set-up and take-down. But not to worry-volunteers will have time to enjoy the festivities. Even if you are unable to volunteer, you can support ARF and Living Free with your attendance.

This event is a wonderful opportunity for vendors and artists to share and sell their wares. Vendors and artists should reserve their spots ASAP by calling or emailing Clay at 951-659-4687/chelgren@living-free.org.

And now is the time for self-proclaimed chili experts to prove that they have the recipe of all recipes. Enter as an individual OR make it a group effort. Belong to a club? How about you and your co-workers? The chili cook-off, which will take place in the center of all the action, will give attendees an opportunity to purchase a ballot for $5, sample the contestants' creations, and vote for their favorite. The winner will collect a $300 prize, a trophy, and bragging rights. Those interested in entering should contact Janice Murasko at janicemurasko@yahoo.com or by calling 951-659-6385. We double-dog dare ya. 🐾

ARF Dog Stars in Student Film

When Janice Murasko was contacted last December by the film department of the Idyllwild School of the Arts asking if her actor dog Baxter would consider acting in a student film, she of course said yes. But once the writer and director of the film Paul Jung met Baxter, he knew it wouldn't work. Baxter's size was just too large for what he had in mind. Being a trainer, Janice began to think about her many "students" and came up with a perfect nominee.

Janice called Cid and Ann Castillo, parents of Chica, a star student. The Castillos enthusiastically agreed to put Chica in the film. "Although Chica had no 'set training,' I knew she was smart enough that we could make it work," said Janice. She was right, and Chica came through with flying colors.

The film, titled "Dog" will premier in mid-May at the school's film festival. Watch ARF's web site and Facebook page for details. You won't want to miss it! 🐾

Baxter's Buddies

Who are Baxter's Buddies? They are his fellow ARF adoptees and their stories. Each month, Baxter will share the story of an ARF rescue, adopted into a loving, forever family.

This month I'll share the story of three lucky ARF cats, Valentino, Bina, and BB. Their mom, Trish Tuley shared with me the story of how they all became one big family. Gosh, I just love these good endings!

Our youngest Kitty died unexpectedly, and Dore and I were both devastated. So we looked in the paper and there was Valentino. We called ARF right away – Valentino had already been placed. So we planned to go the next day to Living Free. However, that morning I went to the Nature Center where I volunteered, and when the kitty story was relayed to the staff there, one of them smiled and said "See that black kitty over there? That's Valentino – he's smart – he figured out how to open the exterior door and get out, so the Nature Center can't keep him." I got him! I immediately drove him to our house – he meowed loudly all the way.

I stopped at Dore's shop, ran in and exclaimed "Guess who I have in the car?"

"A kitty" he said excitedly.

"I have Valentino". We were both thrilled. We let him explore around in the living room for a while, and then I held him for an hour. He is a wonderfully affectionate, loving companion.

After a year or so we lost our two old kitty girls. On a road trip last year, we decided to get kittens – two – brother and sister – black. When we got home we looked in the paper, and there they were - Bina (aka Turpentine) and BB. Hard to convey what a closely bonded threesome they are. From the beginning Valentino (aka Kitty Boo) was surprisingly nurturing to the baby kitties. He was constantly grooming them and they adored him. They all continue to be best buddies. Thanks, ARF!

Trainer Talk

Dogs and Dominance: What's the Real Story?

With the proliferation of dog training television programs, the discussion of dominance and pet dogs is commonplace. "Little Lulu is the alpha dog!" "I am the leader of my pack!" "Fido plays like that because he is showing dominance!" Dominance is likely offered as an explanation for many dog behaviors, and some trainers believe dominance is the path to well-trained dogs.

What is the definition of dominance when it comes to domestic dogs? The first definition relates to interactions between dogs. In this usage, dominance is defined as the power to control access to desirable resources and refers to the relative status of two dogs. In the absence of two dogs, an individual dog cannot be described as dominate because this definition refers to two.

The second, and more controversial definition relates to the dog-human interaction. Trainers who follow the school of thought that the human must be dominate believe the human must exert this dominance in order to get the dog to "behave," such as in staying off of the furniture, not walking through the doorway first, and making a resting dog move rather than walking around him. Today, fewer and fewer trainers subscribe to these ideas than in the past.

Dominance between dogs has undergone more study recently by scientists. Ethologist, Becky Trisko, PhD, studied a group of 24 dogs that regularly engaged with one another at daycare. What she found was a dominance hierarchy among the dogs, but only about 30 percent of the pairs had clear dominance relationships. Dominance rank correlated with age (older dogs tended to rank more highly), but not with size. Contrary to common belief, neither mounting nor performing chin-overs were relative to status. Not once in 224 hours of observation did she observe an "alpha roll."

Trisko observed that dominance was not about coercion, force, or fighting, but rather it was about an understanding by both individuals of their relative social status. In relating her studies to and discussing the use of dominance by humans to train dogs, Trisko said, "Dominance has been wrongly equated with aggression and used to rationalize the use of physical force and intimidation by humans toward dogs. Misunderstanding of the concept of dominance have led to unnecessary physical punishments and abuse of dogs by humans."

Alarmingly, there is evidence that such training styles can create problems. In a 2009 study by M.E. Herron, it was found that these dominance reduction techniques were counterproductive. The confrontational methods associated with training styles that insist humans "get dominance over" the dogs caused aggressive responses in 25 percent of the dogs. Techniques such as grabbing a dog by the jowls and shaking, hitting or kicking, staring, performing alpha rolls (also called "dominance downs"), and physically forcing a dog to release an item were more likely to result in aggressive behavior than were gentler, positive methods.

If we take a look at what we know about dominance between dogs, we see that using forceful methods can actually create problem behavior as well as an increase in a dog's fear and anxiety. "If dominance relationships between dogs and humans are at all similar to dominance relationships between dogs, then dominance does not apply to all relationships, and when it does apply, it does not require the use of intimidation or physical force," said Trisko.

Simply summed up, we must understand the animal with which we coexist. Understanding how social dominance does and does not apply to dogs is part of knowing who dogs are.

Can it get any cuter than this? ARF didn't get Easter flowers this year. Instead we got a black, fluffy Papillion/Chihuahua/Cocker mix. And so we named her Lily.

She is about 6 months old, and already earning "A's" in the form of treats of course, in puppy training school. She loves to walk, is good in the car, and in between beauty naps, she is all about playtime.

She doesn't mind other dogs and is inquisitive about the feline crowd. Lily would love to have her own wardrobe too, as she will try on clothes for hours without a woof. She's not a barker, either. She will have her vet day this week and be ready for that very special someone this weekend.

My name is Meow-Meow. But I don't meow. I talk. Strange syllables and sounds come out of my mouth once in a while, especially if I can't find you.

For the most part, I like other cats. I will keep you company at your desk, for sure. I am still a young male cat, fully grown, and I know my manners: litter box trained, and mother approved.

And truthfully, I am so ready to move on. The cattery is great, and ARF rescued me from the streets when my owner passed away suddenly, but I sure would like my own human to purr with. How about you?

Mayoral Musings continued

The cast members are listed below. We have also listed their character names so you will know who they are in the movie.

STARRING:

- Mitzi Marie Mueller in her leading role as "Mitzi"
- Mikey Mighty-Dog Mueller in his leading role as "Mikey"
- Maximus "Mayor Max" Mighty-Dog Mueller in his leading role as "Max"
- Pookie Mueller in her supporting role as "Pookie"
- Glenn Warren in his supporting role as an extra as "Glenn"

The movie is getting great reviews among the actors, actresses, producers, directors, cinematographers, film editors, the extra, and the key grip. It has been decided that the film will be submitted to the Academy Awards for consideration for an Oscar in 2015.

After the premiere on June 7th, the movie will be in wide release!

While one person associated with the film wise-cracked that it looked like a series of home videos, we want to assure you that EVERY expense was spared in the making of this movie!

Spring Time is Time to Rethink Dog Safety

Ahhh spring time! We love it, our dogs love it. After spending much of the winter indoors, the opportunity to spend more time outside is very inviting for all. But dog parents need to remember that the sights and smells of the great outdoors are very inviting to Fido.

Before sending Fido into your fenced yard for the day, take a few minutes for a security check. Have any breeches in security, a.k.a. a hole in the fence, surfaced since last summer? Has the ground softened near the fence, inviting vigorous digging leading to exploration of the neighborhood? Did this last round of heavy winds weaken your fence? An ounce of prevention could mean the difference between having Fido comfortably at your side tonight and spending a sleepless night worried sick about your best friend.

And this beautiful weather usually encourages parent and pet to get out for those walks that were shelved during the cold weather. Please, do not walk your dog off-leash. Besides the fact that it is illegal, it is inherently dangerous. Even the most docile, well trained dog can fall victim to a speeding vehicle or an another off-leash dog, one that might not be so well behaved. At least when Fido is on a leash, his parent has some control in dangerous situations. Remember, a leash is not a punishment. A leash is a sensible measure of safety for your beloved four-legged family member.

One other thought about leashing Fido. Even if Fido is the friendliest dog on the hill, should he lovingly bound toward a stranger and that stranger becomes frightened, he has put his owner in a precarious situation. If the frightened stranger falls and injures herself, Fido's owner could be held liable.

Of course, ARF's search and rescue team is always here to help dog owners search for their missing pets. And if a mountain resident finds a dog and has that dog in his possession, ARF's search and rescue will scan it for a micro-chip and then help find the owner and temporary housing. 🐾
